

EARL, ERNIE, JOE, and HARLEY TELL IT STRAIGHT.

They're Sun Oil recruiters.

You might meet one of them face-to-face in a campus job interview.

If you do, they'll tell you straight about the petroleum industry, Sun Oil Company and job opportunities.

Any other way, and you took a job with Sun, you probably wouldn't stay very long.

Take Ernie (he's black). He'll tell you being black doesn't make very much difference at Sun. He could suggest that sometimes it helps, citing the recent action of placing 25 million dollars of group insurance with an all-black company.

Sun's not color-blind, or any other kind of blind. It's just that in our work, color or race or religion or sex (within certain limitations) doesn't have anything to do with it.

Then about the industry. Sure, there's some pollution, but we're working and spending like sin to minimize it. We're also necessary. Without gas, oil and grease for fuel, power and lubrication America would be in a mess.

Another point. Our industry is responsible for nearly 1½ million jobs. That's a lot of opportunity.

So—if you've got the urge to get into petroleum, and want to check out one of the industry's exciting, progressive companies, see Earl Pearce, Ernie Harvey, Joe Pew or Harley Andrews. Your Placement Director will know when they'll be on campus.
