

Graphite Statues

Julia Whisenhunt

To me, statues are so much more than just carved stone. They are years of an artist's life, hours upon hours spent tirelessly sculpting marble or other stone to perfection. They are a mark of history, remaining steadfast against weathering and time. They are a foundational pillar of art itself, of hard-earned skill, and of beauty. Drawing statues is not only an exercise of artistic skill, but of seeing the deeper meaning behind an artist's subject. And that on its own, is truly amazing.
