TOUGH
Suzanne Edison, MFA

as iron spikes not for the train’s rail but my body nailed by rogue cells boring my colon’s lining not like wood-chewing wasps who spit out paper nests lined with empty combs waiting for new larvae my digestive aisles ulcerated body could not keep up surgery removed ascending descending useless organ I do not grieve rare complications lungs susceptible to infections stay away from me tough the word so close to touch the night one son had a cough I left found a hotel rubbed the calluses on my fingers thought of rock walls and the climbers I communed with relived the pitted face of El Cap ratcheting up ropes and spikes in cracks hitched together ascending another pitch at the top rare when I slipped the grip of the grey cloud that lingers inside that time the last climb air too thin needed to descend unhinge lungs needed to hold my kids but not too close
